Change of role for Chief Development Officer Jeremy Moore

Ryman Healthcare's Chief Development Officer Jeremy Moore is taking up a new role at New Zealand's largest retirement village operator.

Mr Moore, who has worked at Ryman for nine years, will move into a new part-time role as New Zealand land acquisition manager.

Ryman Group Chief Executive Gordon MacLeod said the change in role meant that Mr Moore's experience would be retained at Ryman.

"Over his time in the development team, Jeremy has been involved in the acquisition of land for 31 Ryman villages.

"It is this experience that we're excited to retain as Jeremy moves from his current position as Chief Development Officer into his new position in our development team."

The New Zealand development team will now report to David Bennett, Chief Financial Officer.

Mr Moore's design team responsibilities will move to Chris Evans, Chief Construction Officer.
