CDC hosts Melbourne data centre site visit

CDC management hosted a briefing today as part of a site visit to its new Brooklyn campus in Melbourne, which became operational in 2024. A copy of the presentation from CDC CEO Greg Boorer is attached.

Brooklyn is CDC's first campus in Melbourne and features a state-of-the-art, highly secure data centre with high-speed interconnectivity between regions. Operational since 2024, the site adds significant high-density capacity to CDC's platform.

Complementing Brooklyn, CDC's Laverton campus - construction of which commenced in February 2025 - will further expand CDC's presence in Victoria. CDC currently has a development plan for bringing total capacity in the state to over 785MW once fully developed.
